Thinking Beyond COVID To The New Educational Paradigm: Preparing & Engaging Students For Success & Completion

Tuesday, November 10 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Almost daily, we reimagine where we were just a few months ago relative to where we are now and wonder what our role will be in shaping our students' future and how this turbulence will impact their college success. The current reality is that we need to proactively reevaluate what a truly holistic approach means for dealing with overwhelmed, depressed, and fearful students whose lives have been isolated and quarantined. Our students remain unsettled, often feeling powerless and at a loss for developing solutions to a situation that cannot be contained.

We need to create opportunities for virtual engagement, support for mental wellness, and strategies for leveraging technology to create inclusive learning opportunities that enhance our colleges' unique realities. Students feel the discomfort of being so unsettled, with no sense of control, and at a loss for what they thought their future would be. The college community must lead the way to a new paradigm for active learning methodologies that embrace hope, value, and tenacity.

This webinar will discuss how leaders (all of us) can make far-reaching changes with expectations of shaping higher education for the better and providing new opportunities and experiences for students. We will look at how to rethink our programs for preparing students for the workforce; how to engage students to be a part of imagining how this unthinkable and frustrating world now can positively affect their future and why resilience, persistence, and hope will be a foundation for success.

Objectives:

- Understand your role and impact in influencing the new paradigm for higher education
- Increase awareness of how we can more effectively adapt to rapidly changing situations at our colleges
- Acquire insight about defining what student goals can be and why that matters
- Learn about the shift in strategies to adjust to new models and opportunities to guide students to success

Speaker(s)

Dr. Denise Swett

Each day brings more disturbing challenges. Higher education is at the forefront of managing their environments in an attempt to continue high quality student learning and goal completion. The time is now to move beyond day to day reality, to include the future and prepare for long-term holistic solutions and revisions that can offer a hopeful outcome for our students.

Denise Swett has worked in higher education over 30 years, at both public and private universities and 2 and 4-year colleges. She is well known for her engaging presentations at national conferences including the American Council on Education (ACE), the National Association of Student Personnel Administrator (NASPA), the League for Innovation for the Community Colleges, American Association of Community Colleges (AACC), National Orientation Directors Association (NODA), Annual Conference on the First-Year Experience and Midwestern Higher Education Compact. She has also served as the Community College Representative on the Washington Higher Education Secretariat Work Group, NASPA's Community College Division Board and California Community College Chief Student Services Administrators Association Executive Board (CCCCSSAA).

During her 11 years at Foothill College, Denise was the Administrator of the Year in 2009 and 2016 and was recognized for her work by the Association of Mexican American Educators of Silicon Valley receiving the Educator of the Year award in 2011. She also received the National Community College Administrator of the Year Award in 2012 from NASPA. Denise started her career in higher education working in student activities at the University of San Francisco for 11 years. She moved to community college serving as Dean of Students at Chabot College, Vice President of Student Services at Cañada College, Dean and AVP of Middlefield Campus & Noncredit Programs and Vice President of Student Services at Foothill College. Denise earned her BA and MPA at San Jose State University and her EdD from the University of San Francisco. Denise retired from higher education in August 2018 but remains committed to continuing her work assisting colleges to implement and enhance online services for students, developing support programs for undocumented/DACA students and providing trainings and professional development.
